Chew On This!

Cowboys will soon be horseback moving cows to public lands and other grazing allotments, where they will spend the summer grazing and tending to their new babies. Meanwhile, at home on the ranch, irrigating season is in full swing! Ranchers are busy moving precious water all over their ranch - watering the hay that will get their cows through the next long winter.

Haying season will be here before we know it, and tractors and other haying implements will be seen cutting hay from morning until dusk. It is a busy time of the year, with long days and little relaxation, but the scenery can't be beat! Ranches are brimming with wildflowers and waterfowl, which together, put on a pretty good show!

Towards the end of the summer, kids will prepare for another year of school, the cows will come home, and we will all hope that the warm weather lasts just a little longer!
